More Election Sensations.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 16.—[Special]—There was another sensation to-day in the contested election cases in this city. Attorneys for the Democratic claimants, Love, superintendent of education, and Bissel, district attorney, appeared before Judge Green in the supreme court and withdrew the contest for offices on the strength of a discovery made yesterday that the recount in the eleventh ward showed that the police returns on election night was right and the amended returns as filed with the city clerk was wrong. The lawyers stated their belief that correct returns from the district named would elect the Republican candidates, Quincy for district attorney and Emerson for superintendent of education, and neither of their clients wanted the office to which he was not legally elected. Judge Green granted an order suspending the injunction against the board of canvassers. This ends the controversy so far as the count is concerned. The criminal proceedings will go on.

Mayor Fitzgerald Will be Impeached.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16.—[Special]—As a result of the persistent editorial utterances in the Times-Democrat calling for an impeachment of Mayor John Fitzpatrick, because of the alleged inability to govern the city during the late strike, his apparent sympathy with the strikers and general listlessness, it seems as if the action in this direction is about to be taken. All that is necessary to bring the case to trial is for twenty-five tax-paying property-holding citizens to file a charge in the civil district court. It is said to-day the papers in the case are being prepared and will probably be filed next Monday. At last night's meeting of the city council Mayor Fitzpatrick presented a message to the council and that body received it and adopted a resolution, complimenting the mayor and Mr. Parkerson upon their adjustment of the labor troubles. Mayor Fitzpatrick laughs at the Times-Democrat's demands for his impeachment.

The Trouble at Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 16.—[Special]—There has been no change in the situation here within the past forty-eight hours, but rumors are flying thick and fast that a compromise is on the tapis. One report says the firm agrees to take back all the old men and recognize the Amalgamated Association, but this is denied by officials. Another and more probable report is that the firm will take back all the old men without recognizing the association. The men are feeling jubilant and are looking forward to an early settlement of the trouble. It is said twenty-four men returned to work yesterday, but the report lacks confirmation.

Fatal Row in North Carolina.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 16.—[Special]—On election day Duncan McHatter, colored, and others created a riot at Spring Hill, he being the leader. Sheriff Livingston went to arrest him, and while reading the warrant McHatter knocked him down with a gun and then shot him, killing him instantly. The murderer is still at large. The difficulty at Spring Hill election day was brought out by the Third party men. A free fight ensued and shots were fired through the building. During the row some ballot boxes were destroyed, resulting in the throwing out of the entire vote of the precinct.

New Directors Elected.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 16.—[Special]—The stockholders of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad elected a new set of directors to-day. Those elected are: Samuel Thomas, Calvin Brice, Wm. P. Clyde, R. G. Erwin, George Gould, R. F. Hayes, C. M. McGhee, John G. Moore, J. C. Maben, Thomas F. Ryan, E. J. Sanford, Geo. F. Stone, W. E. Strong. John G. Moore is a Richmond and Danville director and W. G. Oakman is president of the Danville, and also president of the East Tennessee. The election of these new men gives quite a Richmond and Danville cast to the directorate.

"The Prodigal Father."

ONE of the jolliest comedies of the season is "The Prodigal Father," and one of the strongest companies is that which interprets the play. The plot of "The Prodigal Father," for which Mr. Glen MacDonough may be proudly responsible, is unique in every sense. His dialogue is extremely amusing and his situations in the comedy are surpassingly fantastic. There could be nothing funnier than those scenes in "The Prodigal Father," which show the hilarious Stanley Dodge driven to distraction to keep from his family and neighbors the fact that he has missed going on an exploring expedition to the wilderness of Africa, through his having become fascinated with a singer in a burlesque company. His anxiety, his schemes, his plotting to keep the secret are, without question, the drollest devices that could be imagined. "The Prodigal Father" is provocative of the greatest mirth and merriment. It is seldom, indeed, that good dialogue and clever situations are found in "The Prodigal Father" have so capital a plot to back them up.

The company which Messrs. Jefferson, Klaw and Erlanger have organized to interpret the funniness of "The Prodigal Father" must call for the heartiest congratulations. Among the names to be found are George Denham, George C. Boniface, Jr., Walter Pleugh, George Gaston, Cecil Kingstone, Walter Thomas and the Misses Blanche Chapman Ford, Cora May, Hope Ross, Marguerite Franklin and Little Irene Franklin. Will appear at the Academy of Music Monday, November 21.

WYTHEVILLE WHISPERINGS.

WYTHEVILLE, Nov. 15.—[Special]—The jubilant Democrats were much disappointed yesterday when it was decided not to attempt to celebrate our great victory. It had been advertised that the town would be illuminated and that there would be a torchlight procession, etc., etc., on last evening, but it was found to be a difficult matter to raise the money necessary to get up a creditable celebration and beside the weather was most unfavorable, so the more enthusiastic had to succumb.

A number of our countrymen were in town yesterday, it being county court day, many of whom had expected to stay over to the celebration. There was much hand shaking and mutual congratulation and rather more of the ardent was imbibed than was necessary to testify to the universal joy.

Five candidates have announced themselves for the postoffice and four out of the five have decided to settle the matter by a primary election. The Republicans say that the term of the present incumbent does not expire until 1894.

The handsome drinking fountain, on Main and Church streets, presented by H. G. Wadley to the town, will be an ornament to the street as well as a grateful boon to the thirsty public. It is nearly completed.

The lot owned by Dr. Anman, on Fourth avenue, is to be graded at once, preparatory to building a handsome residence upon it. This is one of the best situations in the town and commands a beautiful view.

The laying of brick pavements on Fourth avenue, in pursuance with the order of the council, which is progressing, will add greatly to the appearance of this street, which is already the finest in the town, and much to the comfort of the citizens in the neighborhood.

The planing mills will open a commissary in the near future.

In spite of hard times the building impetus Wytheville received from the boom has not subsided. Fifty dwelling houses, from twenty five to thirty of them averaging six to eight rooms, and the rest being for the most part neat cottages, have been erected in the last two or three years beside several large business houses and a church.

Col. and Mrs. Robert Sayers give a large reception to their friends Wednesday evening, the 16th.

Miss Addie Greenwood, of St. Louis, who visited friends in Salem and Wytheville this summer, left here for her home a few days since to the sincere regret of her many friends.

The Coming Concert Course.

THE series of concerts to be given in the new Academy of Music are deserving of the most liberal patronage. The price has been fixed at a remarkably low figure, much lower, in fact than that for which such concerts are given in the Northern cities. They are of a class, too, which will be elevating to the cause of music.

Such opportunities are rare, and all should take advantage of them when they come.

The first concert of this course, to be given on Saturday evening of this week, presents two remarkably strong attractions, Miss Rosa Linde and Mr. Franz Wilczek, (pronounced Wil-shek.)

Mr. Franz Wilczek was born in the vicinity of Graz, in Austria, and at an early age evinced a musical talent and zeal which carried him over many obstacles to the long sought goal of Berlin and Joachim. The master bestowed special favor upon the dauntless Austrian lad, and when the latter left Berlin and returned to his native land he proved by triumphant successes that he had mastered his chosen instrument. He came to America in 1889, and made a successful debut before the time honored Art Society, of Pittsburg.

Armed with some letters of introduction, the ambitious young artist went to New York. Here, under the aegis of Theodore Thomas, a foothold was gained at once, and in an incredibly short time the name of Franz Wilczek became a real attraction in many important metropolitan concerts. Later he traveled as soloist with Theodore Thomas' celebrated orchestra and also with the famous Anton Seidl, and is without any superiors in this country to-day.

Miss Rosa Linde well deserves the appellation of America's most famous contralto. She is endowed with a noble contralto voice of extraordinary range (from C to B, within a semi-tone of three octaves). Most of her life has been spent in Pittsburg, where she had the exceptional advantage of being one of Mr. Carl Retters' very few vocal pupils and proteges. In 1887 she went to New York and subsequently to Paris, and the results of her assiduous studies under famous instructors in those cities have been manifest in the important concert engagements at Boston, New York and elsewhere so successfully filled since her return to America.

Ivan Petroff Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—[Special]—Superintendent of Census Porter to-day discharged Ivan Petroff, the special agent for Alaska, who it is stated gave the State Department false information for use in its Bering sea sealeries controversy with Great Britain.

New Hampshire's Official Vote.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 16.—[Special]—The official returns give Smith, Republican, for governor, 43,741; McKinney, Democrat, 41,424. Smith's plurality, 2,317, and majority, 643.

Needles Are Very Ancient.

The needle is one of the most ancient implements or instruments of which we have any record. The old time needles were unlike the modern luxury, they having been made of wood, bronze, bone, etc., and without eyes, a circular depression at the blunt end having been so fashioned as to enable it to carry the thread. Pliny describes the needles of bronze which were used by the ancient Greeks and Romans, and since his day similar instruments have been found in comparative abundance both at Herculaneum and Pompeii. The first account of the manufacture of "white iron," or steel needles, says that they were made at Nuremberg, in 1460, and, while the exact date is in doubt, they are said to have been made in Britain as early as 1545. The account further adds that the first needles manufactured in England were made by a Spanish negro, who died without having taught any one his art.

During the reign of Elizabeth the industry was revived, and, strange to say, also by a foreigner—a native of India. The forerunner of the present great Redditch needle manufactory was established by Christopher Greening and a Mr. Damer in 1650. Many unsuccessful attempts were made to bring out the "drilled eye" needle before it was finally introduced in 1826. Two years later the "burnishing machine," with which the eyes of needles are highly polished, was completed. In this machine, which is very simple, the needles are all strung on a wire, which revolves rapidly, thereby imparting a beautiful finish to the eye.—St. Louis Republic.

The Marks of Foolish Boyhood.

Mr. B—, a wealthy and respectable physician in a southern city, died a few months ago. He bore throughout the greater part of his life a strange cross, of which none but his most intimate friends were cognizant.

When a lad of twelve years B—, like many other boys of that age, grew restless and discontented with home. He ran away, and for a year was a cabin boy on a ship. While there, ambitious to be decorated like the other sailors, he had a word of coarse meaning tattooed upon his arm.

Before the year was over he repented of his folly bitterly, and returned to be forgiven, and taken back to the old pure life and tenderness of home. The "wild ones" were sown, the outbreak was over and soon almost forgotten by his family. He was an earnest, hardworking student, and an affectionate son, and grew up into an honorable, useful manhood.

"I might," he once said to a friend, "have forgotten that wretched year with all its damage to body and soul, but for that accursed mark. I could never wash or scrape it out. There it was with its vile, meaning stamping me for life. I was always conscious of it; always in fear lest I should expose it to my wife and children. They knew it was there, but I hoped that they would somehow forget."

It was visible even after death. A friend covering it closely said, "It is hard that so good a man must carry to his coffin the sign of his foolish youth."—Youth's Companion.

The Effect of Music on the Heart.

At the military parade a small boy from the country, who had scarcely ever heard martial music, turned suddenly, putting his hand on his heart.

"It makes me feel so queer here," he said, the tears standing in his eyes.

"You are ill?" inquired his anxious guardian.

"No. I think I like it," he gasped.

The untutored lisping of the boy of the pleasure that is nigh akin to pain describes the effect of music, frequently more serious to impressionable people. A physician has said that it is a question if on great public occasions it is not the effect of music, saying to the soul the things unutterable, that is responsible for sudden illness, faintings, hysterics and calls for the ambulance. These physiological effects he traces through the emotions. The fountains of the deep get broken up. The troubling of the emotions disturbs the secretions, there is an uneasy stir, it increases into an excitement, there is a call for a policeman, the crowd presses right and left to make way for the bearers of a prostrate form, and it is all the fault of the band.—New York Evening Sun.

Animal Color.

In experiments on the influence of food and surroundings on the color of animals, Mr. E. B. Poulton reared caterpillars of the pepper moth under different conditions. Those confined among green leaves and twigs became green, those having black or brown twigs mingled with their food were brown or black, and others were turned light colored by white paper. With artificial colors red and blue tended to produce a dark coloration, though very strangely, painted twigs had not the same effect as those with the same natural tints. It was shown that the sensory stimulus producing the change did not act through the eye, but through the skin, and consisted of the formation of a definite pigment, being therefore slower than in the chameleon and frog, and capable of modifying the color of a caterpillar only once or twice in its lifetime.—Ohio State Journal.

Fifth Century Authors.

Herophilus, one of the Alexandrian school, wrote a treatise on the practice of medicine, on obstetrics, on the eye, and on the pulse, which he correctly referred to the movements of the heart. He was aware of the existence of the lacteals and of their anatomical relations to the mesenteric glands. Erasistratus—his colleague and a pupil of Theophrastus and Chrysippus—was aware of the nature of the heart and its connection with the veins and arteries, but he fell into the error that the veins were for the conveyance of air and the arteries for that of blood. Otherwise he anticipated Harvey's great discovery. He knew also that there were two kinds of nerves—those of motion and those of sensation.—Westminster Review.

Wasting Medicine.

Mr. Thrifty—Doctor, I don't think much of that cough medicine of yours.

Dr. Curem—I am very sorry to hear that. What is the reason?

Thrifty—Why, there is so much of it dead waste.

Curem—Dead waste? Thrifty—Yes, I hadn't taken more than a quarter of the bottle when my cough had entirely disappeared, and there is the other three-quarters just thrown away.—Exchange.

A Joker Among Birds.

The bluejay is a practical joker. It is his habit to conceal himself in a mass of leaves near the spot where small birds are accustomed to gather, and when they are enjoying themselves in their own fashion will suddenly frighten them almost to death by screaming out like a hawk. Of course they scatter in every direction, and when they do so the mischievous rascal gives vent to a cackle that sounds very much like a laugh.—Yankee Blade.
